27 October 2010, Fort Collins, Colorado – Dogs lose legs for many reasons, but the most common ones are accidents and bone cancer. The shock of learning that a beloved family dog needs an amputation is upsetting, stressful and frightening for parents. But now, they can learn what life is really like for amputee dogs with Three Legs & A Spare – a Canine Amputation Handbook from Tripawds.com.

Find All the Best Canine Amputation Advice, Now

Since 2006, Tripawds has been the world's leading online resource for those facing amputation for their dogs. Whether a parent is coping with a bone cancer diagnosis, a sudden accident, a fracture that wouldn't heal or a congenital birth defect, the Tripawds community offers the best tips and advice about surgery, recovery, bone cancer treatments and life on three legs.

Three Legs & a Spare is the first in a series of fully interactive PDF books that includes the most current, best tips and advice from the Tripawds blogs, discussion forums and comprehensive resources for amputee dogs and their people. For nearly four years, the Tripawds community has provided valuable advice and support to dog parents who are facing the amputation decision. This new e-book compiles the most helpful information in a convenient, frequently updated PDF that can be read on or offline, with direct links to specific blog posts, forum topics and videos addressing the most common concerns about amputation for dogs.

This 108-page interactive PDF is a collection of hundreds of informative links that save dog parents time and provide immediate answers to their questions. Parents will quickly find information about common concerns such as:

- Canine amputation costs
- How to decide if amputation is right for your dog
- Preparing yourself, your dog and your home
- Amputation questions to ask your vet
- Post-surgery pain management strategies
- Common amputation recovery scenarios, and how to handle them

More than four years in the making, Three Legs & a Spare is packed with links to videos, news, forum topics and other specific sections of the Tripawds community where parents can continue their discussion with members in real time. This fully interactive PDF addresses bone cancer treatment options, rehabilitation and physical therapy tips, and spotlights helpful Tripawds gear suggestions and nutrition tips that can help make an amputee dog's life easier.

Three Legs and a Spare is the first in a series of resourceful Tripawds e-books, available now for a discounted introductory price of $14.95.

The Tripawds e-book is a constantly evolving resource. As new information about canine amputation and bone cancer becomes available and older conclusions become outdated, Tripawds will update the PDF so it always includes the most current information. Once a Tripawds parent purchases “Three Legs & A Spare,” they will always be able to download any future versions.

Free Sample Pages and Bonus Worksheets

Readers who download the book today will also get free bonus links to the most popular free Tripawds downloadable materials such as “How to Build a Balance Board” for canine rehabilitation therapy, and free tear-out worksheets including:

- Information to leave with your Tripawd's caregiver
- A daily regimen worksheet to chart diet, medications and exercise
- Three pages of important questions you can take to the vet

Money-Back Guarantee

“This e-book is the best resource for anyone seeking fast answers about canine amputation,” says Tripawds co-founder René Agredano. If a buyer is not completely satisfied with the helpful resources and links in Three Legs & a Spare, Agredano says that a full refund will be given within ten days of purchase, and the buyer still gets to keep the book.

Tripawd Heroes Meet Daily at Tripawds.com

Tripawds.com is an Internet community for three-legged pets and their humans to share support, tips, advice, movies and inspirational tales of canine cancer survivors and other “tripod” dogs. Founders Jim Nelson and René Agredano started Tripawds.com after their own dog Jerry was diagnosed with bone cancer in 2006, and had his leg amputated to extend his quality of life. The site shares photos, videos and the stories of others to help prove, “It’s better to hop on three legs than to limp on four.” The couple founded Tripawds to show other dog parents that the loss of a limb doesn't mean the end of a good quality of life.
